

“Sovereign Secure has substantial experience with all aspects of IT security, which has enabled us to develop the Virtual Chief Information Security Officer (vCISO), tailored to an individual organisation’s requirements”

Many organisations are unable to appoint, or do not require, a full time CISO, but are still committed to their information security. Sovereign Secure’s Virtual CISO or vCISO is a key resource for many small to medium-sized organisations’, including those who need to adhere to a wide range of legal, regulatory and contractual requirements.

Sovereign Secure is owned and managed by highly qualified security professionals, working closely with a carefully selected, experienced team to cover all our clients’ information security requirements. Our consultation and project-based work with clients has extended to the development of our bespoke Virtual CISO service, which has been developed through working closely with a broad range of clients and identifying the need for this industry leading service.

We understand that many small- to medium- sized organisations need to take a serious view of their information security, and adhere to a wide range of legal, regulatory, and contractual security requirements (such as PCI, HIPAA, partner contracts, or customer demands). However, due to reasons such as cost, structure, frequent change and resource levels, some businesses are unable to justify or are not currently at a level that requires an experienced CISO on a permanent, full-time basis. While many of these organisations may have IT teams and employees managing the majority of their IT issues and requirements, they will rarely have an experienced IT security team and CISO. This results in challenges on an immediate basis, particularly when it comes to addressing the company’s long- term or strategic information security needs.

Having an executive-level security professional on staff as a full time employee (or even trying to hire one) can be a difficult, lengthy and costly process.

Many organisations identify the fact that they don’t need a full time executive level resource, although they do require senior, experienced advice beyond the capabilities of a standard IT security individual or

SOVEREIGN SECURE

After working closely with our clients, Sovereign Secure highlighted what these organisations really need is a trusted advisor who can provide security leadership and guidance on demand, to help out with the 'heavy lifting' when necessary.

HOW IT WORKS

Following an initial consultation for the Sovereign Secure Virtual CISO service, a client purchases an agreed amount of hours or days on a monthly subscription basis, which can be drawn down and used based on your personal business needs and requirements. The result is that our clients are provided a senior 'virtual' security advisor who can answer questions and help guide security efforts, strategies and plans relative your organisation's status, position and requirements.

Whether you need focused time and support, or just a few hours or days per month, you'll have a highly qualified security professional that you can reach out to for assistance whenever needed.

THE BENEFITS

- Immediate and ongoing access to substantial information security for senior personnel.
- An expert, with an independent and unbiased tailored assessment for your information security, risk, compliance and security posture.
- Ability and experience to produce and effectively deliver information security strategies and plans. Lead, source or consult on the procurement of information security services for your organization(s).
- In the event of a security incident, your Virtual CISO can quickly co-ordinate a response and take necessary actions to instigate and manage all aspects of an investigation.
